Trends and Developments in Doctoral Education

As doctoral education continues to evolve worldwide, developments in it reflect wider changes in universities as 'managed' organisations and in academic work, including casualization, new managerialism and leaderism, collectivisation and specialisation, as well as speed-up. This is alongside the existence of several different systems for doctoral education.

Despite growth in numbers, doctorates still remain somewhat exclusive; social class, ethnicity and gender still shape entry, and may also influence what is studied and how it is valued.
